The CCSbudget has two parts,an operating budget and a capital budget. The operating budget pays for the day-to-day expenses of running the district, including salaries and benefits, instructional supplies and transportation. The vast majority (83%) of the operating budget is tied to salaries and benefits. The capital budget pays for the design and construction of new schools, as well asthe renovation and replacement of existing schools. In the event of voter-approved bond funding, these funds become part of the CCS capital budget. They may not be used for district operating expenses. Please indicate your level of awareness aroundthe information above.

Even with local supplements, the average annual salary for NC teachers is about $46,000, which is about $10,000 less than the national average. On average, it is $7,000 less than the salary of teachers in neighboring states, such as Georgia, Virginia and South Carolina. In the past five years, Cabarrus County Schools teachers (and other staff) have only received pay increases totaling 2.2%. Of the total, 1.2% came from the state in 2012 - 2013 and 1% came from local funding (Cabarrus County) in 2013-2014. During Gov. Jim Hunt's administration (1993 - 2001), North Carolina teacher salaries ranked 24th in the nation. Under the current administration, teacher salaries rank 46th in the nation.
