

Blue Butterfly Family Grief Center

A place for grieving children and teens

The loss of a family member or other significant person is difficult for children and teens to process. Children and adults grieve differently but share a sense of isolation from their world – a world upturned through a significant loss. Children are often reluctant to open up to other family members, wanting to protect those who are also suffering. At Blue Butterfly Family Grief Centers, free support is available.

Blue Butterfly is the only evidence-based program in our region that helps grieving children, teens and caregivers through professional counseling, peer-support groups and therapeutic activities. Our mission is to provide grief support for families, children and teens, ages 5-18 who have experienced the death of a significant person in their lives.
