A Message from the Superintendent

Eimear O'Brien, Ed.D.
Superintendent

You may have seen Clovis Unified employees at school, during a recent trip to the grocery store or at dinner on a Friday night sporting shirts emblazoned with the phrase "Building Tomorrow Today."

More than just a slogan for a fun T-shirt, this is a philosophy to which we are holding tightly as we interact with close to 43,000 students each day.

Our students truly are the future of our community, and the experiences they have during their time in Clovis Unified will shape the adults they become.

Education influences our world long after the 13 years a student spends in our schools, and the quality of that experience shapes our community far into the future. Our relative success becomes reflected in economic development, public safety, home values, and tourism. And, in Clovis Unified, our responsibility to deliver quality education to support a vibrant community is never out of mind.

Our three aims keep us focused on what we have identified as the keys to maintaining high standards in our schools and for our community.

- Maximizing Achievement for ALL Students
- Increasing Efficiency and Effectiveness, and
- Hiring, Developing, Sustaining and Valuing a High Quality, Diverse Workforce

These aims are at the heart of our work to support the academic and social emotional well-being of our students, and they rely on both our incredible team of caring educators and on you, our community.

We can't do it alone. We need you. We need a community that is invested in its schools, that cares about our challenges and our successes, and that comes alongside us in difficult times. Our kids deserve no less.

Just as we focus on the tiny details in every construction project to ensure that our school facilities (like the Terry Bradley Educational Center opening in 2025) are crafted with care and purpose, we focus education on the fine details that make the difference between mediocre and high quality education.

In the following pages, you will find our Community Report that provides just a few of the many highlights from our past school year. This special edition of CUSD Today is provided to every address in our boundary as a way to share stories and data that illustrate the return on your tax dollars invested in Clovis Unified and in your local schools.

By working together and staying focused on executing our three aims with quality, we are committed to building tomorrow today in our classrooms across every one of our 52 campuses. I invite you to be our partners in creating a bright future for our 43,000+ children and for our community that we all call home.

Eimear O'Brien, Ed.D.
