Steven A. Costantino

Class of 1975

Steven's fondest connections to Copiague High School are the lifelong friendships that he has enjoyed. He feels fortunate that Copiague afforded him the opportunity to get to know people with many different racial and ethnic backgrounds and the ability to communicate effectively with many different types of people. Following graduation, Steven attended St. John's University, majoring in Criminal Justice before entering St. John's University School of Law. Mr. Costantino had the privilege of completing several internships including the Suffolk County Legislature, the Suffolk County Legal Aid Society and the prestigious Long Island Law firm of Morris, Graham, Stevens and McMorrow where he worked closely with William H. Morris, a renowned trial lawyer. Mr. Costantino upon graduation accepted an associate position with the Morris firm where he worked on several high profile cases. In 1984 he fulfilled his dream of opening a private practice in Copiague. In 1991 his brother Joseph was admitted to the Bar and they formed the current firm of Costantino & Costantino where they practice personal injury and criminal litigation. Steven is a loving husband and father, and donates much of his time to youth league programs.
