Dr. Michael P. DiGiovanna

Class of 1980

Dr. DiGiovanna's fondest memory is participating in the Senior Class Play, Fiddler on the Roof. He attended Cornell University graduating with a double major in biochemistry and music. He then went on to the Yale University School of Medicine on a full scholarship where he earned the dual degrees of M.D. and Ph.D. His Ph.D. is in Pharmacology in the field of cancer research. He did his internship and residency in Internal Medicine at the Yale – New Haven Hospital combining that training with a postdoctoral research fellowship and clinical fellowship in Medical Oncology. Dr. DiGiovanna is now an Assistant Professor of Medicine at the Yale University School of Medicine performing research on breast cancer. He continues to perform on the piano, mostly with jazz groups.
