Tony Gaudio

Class of 1984

During high school, Tony demonstrated great empathy for peers who had experienced rejection. Although Tony struggled with dyslexia, he made up for his disability through persistence. Briefly considering an acting career, Tony dedicated himself to psychology. He graduated from York University in Toronto with a B.A. in Psychology and from Barry University with an M.S. in Mental Health Counseling. He has completed all requirements for his Ph.D. except for the dissertation. He lives in South Florida where he owns his own Mental Health Clinic providing individualized and group therapy. His vision is that therapeutic services make a difference. He is strongly committed to helping people with HIV deal with stigma and disclosure, and become self-actualized.

“Vision with action can change the world.”
