Dr. Susan A. Higgins

Class of 1979

Dr. Higgins has fond memories of her days at CHS related to her participation in a variety of varsity sports. She attended the University of Rochester where she earned her B.S. in biochemistry while completing independent cancer research projects at the Medical Center. She continued her work in cancer research at New York University, earning a Master's Degree in biochemistry. She attended the University of Rochester School of Medicine before completing an internship at St. Mary's Hospital in Rochester and a residency at Yale-New Haven Hospital. Susan is currently an Assistant Professor at the Yale University School of Medicine specializing in the treatment of breast and gynecologic cancers.
