Students Begin To Acquire Stature

Everywhere the long summer days drew to a close bringing with their conclusion a reminder that school must begin again—the crowds, the studentbody, the hurry and activity of school life. With the nip of fall air, there was a tingle, an excitement of being young, of being a part of a fast moving world.

And so it was, as the doors of Sky View High School opened once more to the reluctant yet eager faces of students who must move into another year. Few paused to look back but instead looked to what lay ahead.

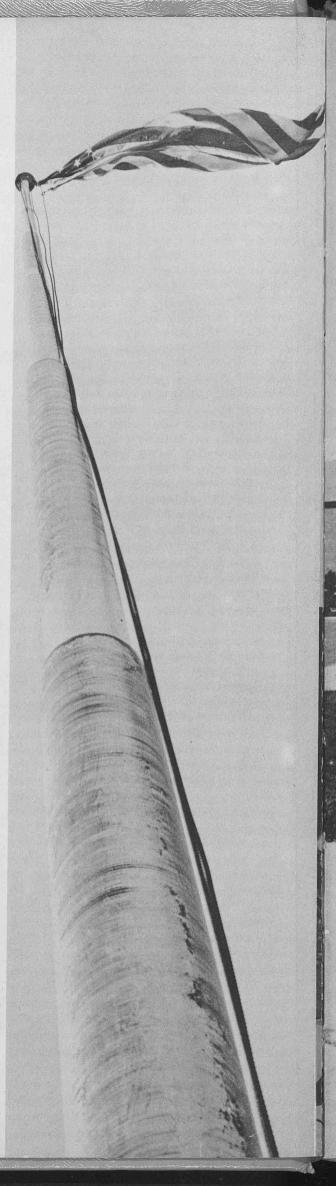

The empty halls once more were busy, full of life. One became lost in the crowd. All ached for recognition; all longed to be someone. Maybe this would be the year to attain the goals they had set

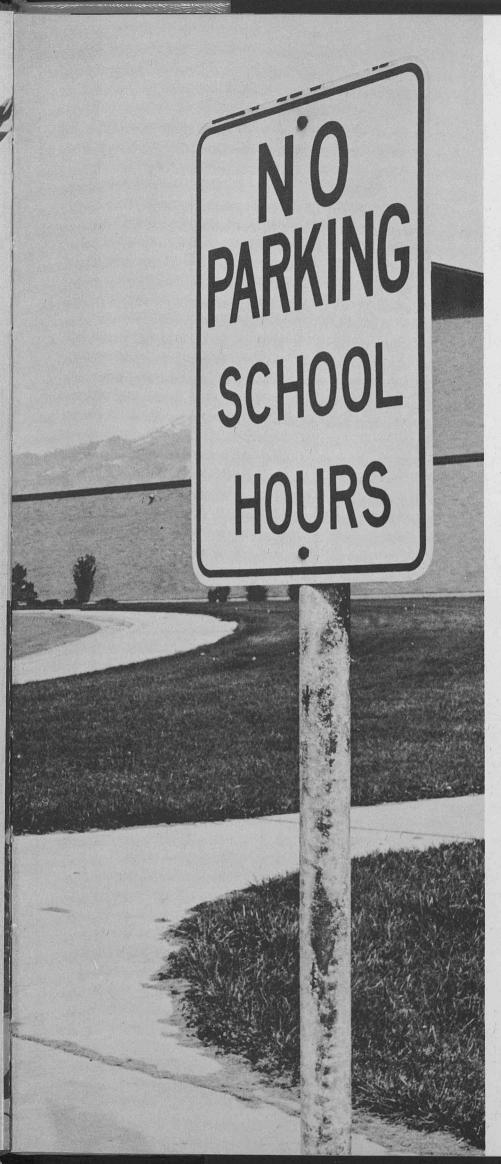

On the faces of some were reflected a gleeful moment of renewing friendships; on others a look of bewilderment. Still others showed distaste at returning or maybe their faces contracted with the pressure of a decision that may have affected their year. All showed a desire to grow and develop, to achieve . . .

Stature.

Students Build For Their Future

The classroom door opened and students filed in, taking the seat of their choice. The seats would be assigned, but that would come soon enough. The pencil sharpener, the chalkboard, the dusty erasers-all a part of school impressed once more upon their minds its reality. The pledge of allegiance was recited and class was begun; a new year was commenced. They were to see a rebirth of knowledge, of sports, of activities, of social life. There would be a touch of the past, but a flood of the future. The year was new and its own personality and stature would be made by the students and left to become a part of that beautiful school beneath the majesty of the mountains. Some triumphs would lift them to happiness, but there would be disappointments to bring them tears. Always there would be hope. The plans for their growth developed in their own minds and in the minds of those who led them. They would set standards, scholastic excellence, sportsmanship and spirit. They would thrill at learning, exchange ideas, make decisions, share laughter; and deep in the hearts of all they would make memories. To some, it would be their last chance to prepare before entering broader horizons. To others it was a precious time. To all it was the time to build for their future.

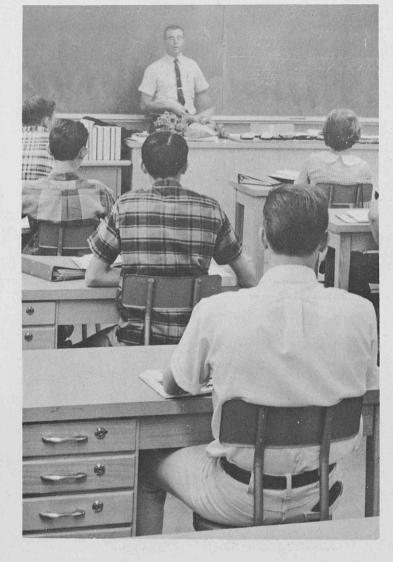

Stature was to be gained in many places. A look up the aisle at the staggered rows of the auditorium seats brought to mind culture and entertainment. Many enjoyable assemblies were presented there. The rows of bleachers in the gym and on the football field marked a place of physical growth and development. To many young men they held a special meaning. A glance at rows of desks in a classroom is a reminder of a place where growth and development of the mind took place. No student will ever forget the many hours spent in classrooms receiving instruction. The library provided a place to study and learn of a great variety of subjects. The long halls were places of friendship and laughter. A walk in the morning or during lunch periods meant passing through groups of students that lined the hall. A gaily decorated cafeteria was a place of social growth. Many gay times took place there. The meaningful flag at the top of a tall pole symbolizes the place of freedom that allowed such an establishment of learning. A beautiful building, a spirited studentbody, and a new year-pride in being a part of it filled the students and they stood just a little taller ... each striving for stature.

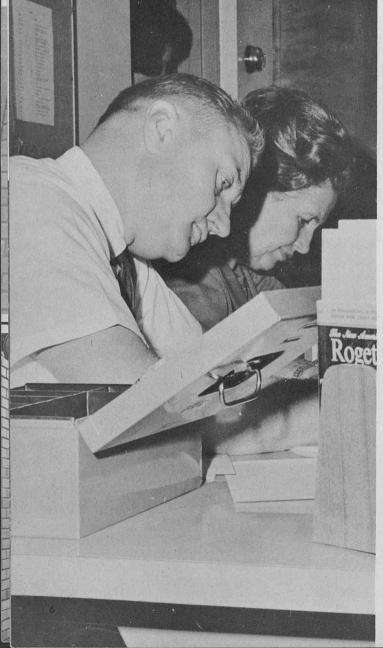

ADMINISTRATION... Stature Through Leadership

Faculty bulletins, lesson plans, chalk holders, noisy students, tests to be made, papers to be corrected and bulletin boards-all played a great part in Sky View life. The faculty and administration held the position of leadership. Under their watchful eye many students would come and go. Maybe through their efforts a student could be brought to accept himself, to make the most of his abilities, to find his place in life. The students must be helped to gain the knowledge they would need to carry them onward. It was the duty of the teachers to accomplish this, to create in them a desire and a like for learning. They must teach students to speak for themselves. With adults to govern and guide them, the students could have a voice in school affairs. To the instructor, the shine in a student's eye, the delight as they grasped an idea was worth the hours taken to prepare the lessons. Even though they looked relaxed in the faculty lounge, their minds were busy with plans and ideas. It required much patience and time to fulfill them. Besides daily classes, most of the faculty spent extra time as an advisor for a club, class or organization. All were part of the stature of Sky View.

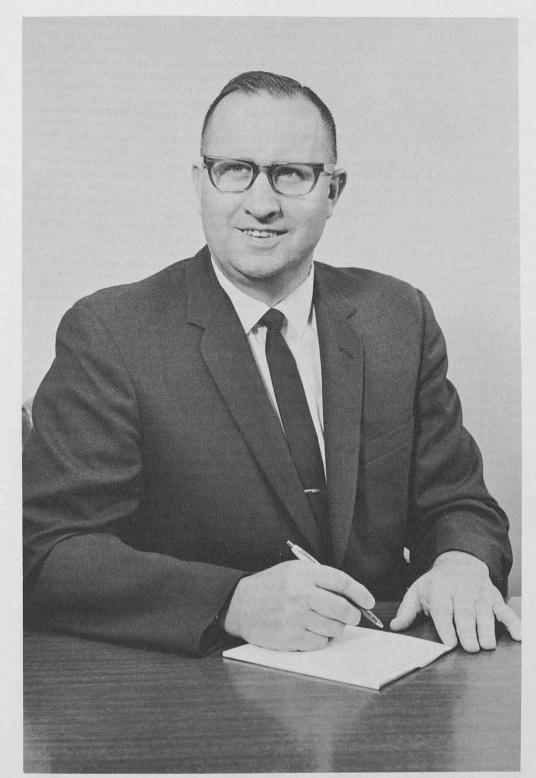

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Pleasing the people of the county, choosing qualified personnel, planning a worthwhile curriculum, raising funds, and making school policies were only a few of the problems that confronted the seven members of the Cache Board of Education. Coming from many walks of life, these hard-working people united to work for the people who placed them in their positions. Frequent meetings were held to keep the educational program in line with the desires of the public, teachers, students and administration. What looked to be an easy task proved to be a difficult one. In the financing of the school district, the board met many problems, but they efficiently handled them. School policies were outlined, transportation provided, and school lunches directed. Their help and support of school activities were highly esteemed by the students and administration. To the members of the board: Keith C. Hansen, Director of Business Administration; Willis Hall, President; C. Bryce Draper, Superintendent; Dean W. Haslam, member; Doris W. Budge, member; Clifford J. Stauffer, member; and Mark B. Lindley, Vice President, we express a sincere thanks for their work and support. Their long hours of effort were repaid with the stature the schools of the district achieved.

Stature implies growth and development. It includes some maturity too. This describes Sky View. The building is strong and durable. Except for an occasional face-lifting, it will change very little. It has furnished the setting where growth and development took place. The real stature was created by the students and teachers who lived within these walls.

No one can deny our progress. It has meant sweat and tears, happiness and heart-break to mature into a united studentbody.

We have experienced all of these. We have learned that there is no substitute for hard work and dedication.

We have patterned our school after no one. There was no reason to ape the schools of the world. Our standards and styles were unique. Our rapport between student and teacher was enviable. Each student was an ideal for the other, teachers were ideal for the lot, and the whole atmosphere built our stature.

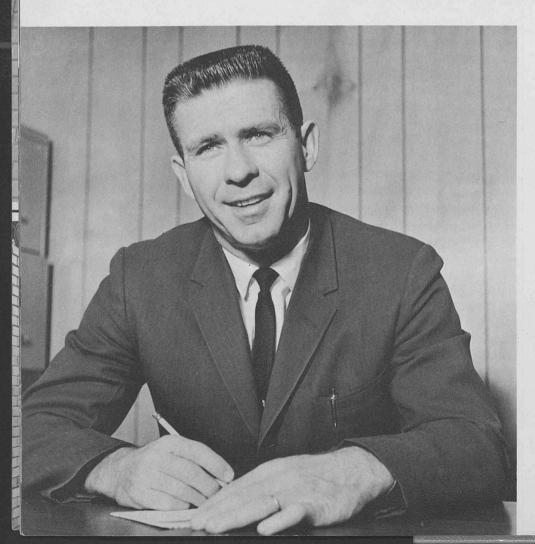

Kenneth Webb

Principal

When it came to student life, the man to see was Mr. Irel Eppich. He made a familiar figure with his clipboard and pen as he moved about his numerous duties. Supervision of the vast program of student activities was a tremendous task that he took proudly in his stride. The planning of assemblies, scheduling of ballgames, outlining of pep rallies, the coordination of clubs and instruction of student government were but a few of the problems he faced. A safer school was the result of the safety program he directed. His warm personality and friendly smile were great assets to him when he confronted behavior difficulties. It was a common sight to see his quiet little office filled with students seeking his help. The many responsibilities of the position he held required a man of true stature. And so it was.

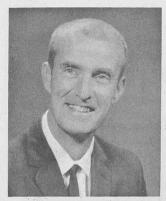

Mr. Irel Eppich Vice-Principal

Mr. Glen Oliverson very capably filled a newly created position on the staff. He coordinated new programs in our school. Special school services were made available to students through his office. Careful attention was given to attendance patterns, especially as they related to academic achievement. Tests were administered to determine future courses of action. Visual aids were used and distributed under his capable direction. Many students benefited from his wise counsel. It did not take long for students to learn that he was truly interested in their welfare. He made them feel wanted, whether charting a needed reading course or discussing our aspirations in life. It was through the assistance of leaders like he that we achieved the stature we did.

COUNSELORS Stimulate ... Students Develop

Mr. Taggart Senior Counselor

One of the most valuable departments of our school was the guidance department. Individual counseling, a variety of tests, orientation, and information on educational or vocational problems were available for those who desired them. Their offices had a friendly atmosphere where students were welcomed and helped in gaining personal insight. Their warm smiles and helpful attitudes were appreciated as they assisted students in the attainment of stature.

SECRETARIES... Efficiently Aid School

Messages from home, piles of absence slips, tardy permits, student records, letters to be typed, and registration cards found their way to the desks of our four secretaries. Any student who was absent will remember the well-known call from the attendance office. Those in classes recall the familiar voice over the public address system making announcements concerning school activities. The students and administration were appreciative and very grateful to these ladies who cheerfully and patiently assisted us in times of need.

The tantalizing aroma of hot rolls, the rattling of trays, and the hum of voices marked the beginning of the lunch hour. Starving students crammed through double doors and long lines to partake of tasty food, delicious desserts, or handfuls of hot rolls. Hours over hot ovens, much planning, and large quantities of food went into the nutritious meals that received acclaim from administrators across the state. A pleasant atmosphere was added to the meal with small vases of flowers placed on the tables. The satisfied look on the faces of the students was the reward as they worked to increase our stature with healthy bodies.

STUDENTBODY... Stature Through Advancement

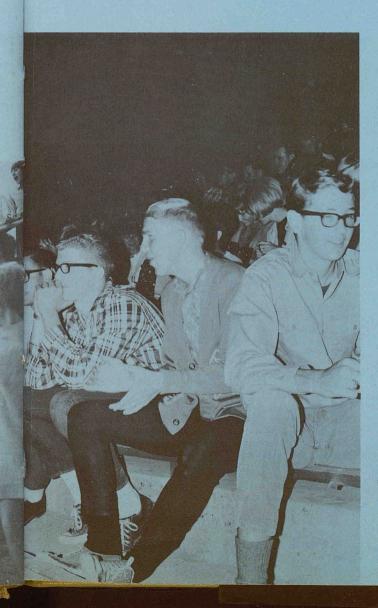

A messy locker, a noisy classroom, a silent hall, a marble bench, a prolonged lecture, a dreamy dance—a school, Sky View. Student life became a flow of life rushing on and on. To some it was a challenge, to others, something to be tolerated, and to the wisest, the most precious time of their life. There were many things to be done in what seemed so little time. A breathless pause was made.

The hours spent in class provided a variety of experiences at learning. The past was explored and the present discussed. Future leaders grew, learned, developed and built for their tomorrows. But sometimes in anticipation of immediate activities the moments would be lost, never to be captured again. But with the getting of knowledge, the gathering of facts and the acquiring of diplomas, it was necessary to learn to give of themselves. A club meeting, a debate, a swim meet, a dress rehearsal, a ball game, or a hard workout filled after school hours and enriched lives.

There were rallies, the ones where sometimes it was hard to be enthused, and those where spirit was high. There were assemblies that provided entertainment and culture and gave opportunity to develop talents. Loyalty to school and team were shown as the studentbody cheered with the team in victory and shared their sorrow in defeat. There were dances set in a delightful atmosphere. There were new friends, and old ones. Precedents were set and a step forward was taken with a position of leadership. Maybe there was that "occasion" or that special someone. Lives were built around school and its activities. The association, the education, the work, the joys, the heart aches, the laughter experienced made a successful year-new growth achieved, stature attained.

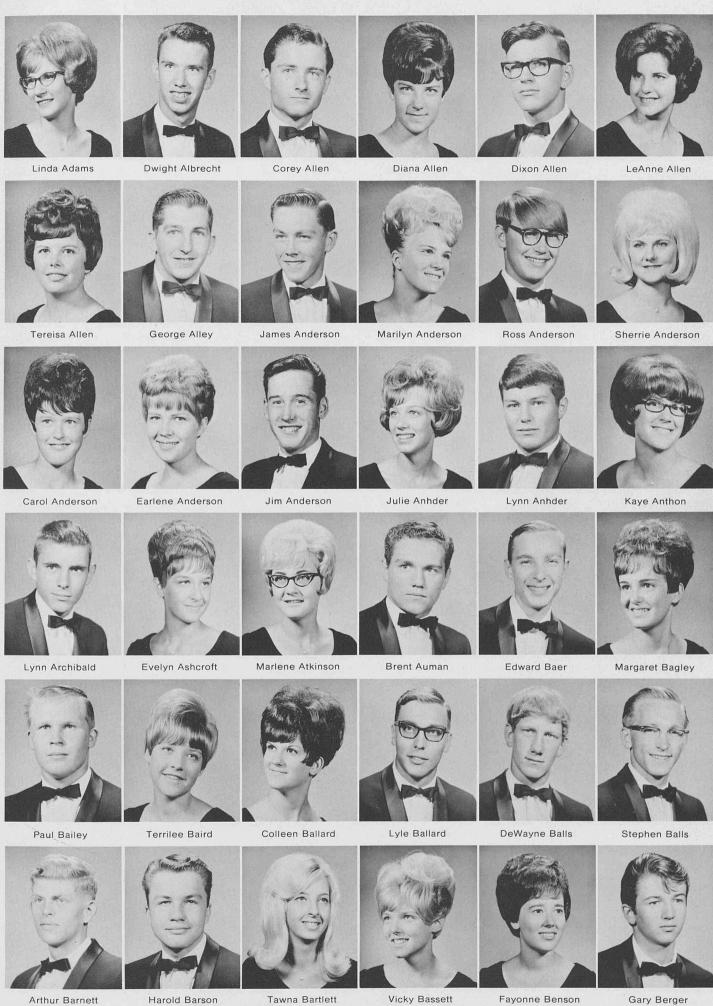

Eager to prove themselves, the seniors returned to Sky View. This year would end their lives as students of Sky View High. They will remember the fast succession of events that placed them there. Long hours of study, crowded halls, school rings, disappointments, and many warm friendships will always be cherished. The glamour and beauty of the Senior Prom will remain a highlight to all. Their fine assembly displayed the talent and creativeness among them. The laughter and pranks they shared on Senior Days were, genuine. Then with diplomas in hand and heavy hearts, they look to their future with excited eagerness. The experiences and knowledge gained within these walls will allow them to walk into the world prepared. All were proud of the stature attained.

Leading them in their final year was Brian Lundberg as their enthusiastic President. Quiet, but likeable DelRay Gunnell served as Vice President and sweet, cheerful Donna Johnson made a sparkling secretary. It was a memorable year.

The juniors looked forward to another successful year. After having survived the trials of sophomores, they returned with renewed confidence. Recognizing their responsibilities of leadership, they contributed their time and energy to make the year a success. Having won the coveted assembly trophy as sophomores, they worked especially diligently to have a repeat performance. The junior prom assembly was an excellent example of their abilities. The elegance of the junior prom with its promenade was an event that will be long remembered by all who attended. United as a class, they hopefully awaited the year when they would be the leaders. All will cherish the pleasant times they enjoyed as juniors. Chosen as the very capable leaders were Bruce Jorgenson, as the tall and clever president. Nedra Nielson served as their sweet and efficient secretary. Quin Pinson, as vice president presented unique ideas to make class events a success. These students with the support of their class worked to make it a stature year.

Eager to be accepted, the sophomores entered the halls of Sky View. Combining students from three different schools was a challenge they accepted and met with much enthusiasm. All can recall the fright of walking down the hall under the surveillance of upperclassmen. Then came the sophomore initiation assembly and the feeling that came as their name was called . . . or was not. Being a talented group, they soon became a valuable asset to the school as they shared their talents with others. Creativeness was shown in the Christmas assembly they presented. The Christmas dance, themed to "Silver Bells", was decorated to the season and created a dreamy atmosphere. Class elections brought to leadership positions three competent students. Tall and good-looking Jim Bradley took the responsibilities of president. Lynette Thorne was chosen as secretary and used her talents in uniting her class. Sparkling Sheri Peterson, vice-president, directed her energy to making her class succeed. With spirit, the sophomores became an important part in the success of the school year.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL... Builds a Firm

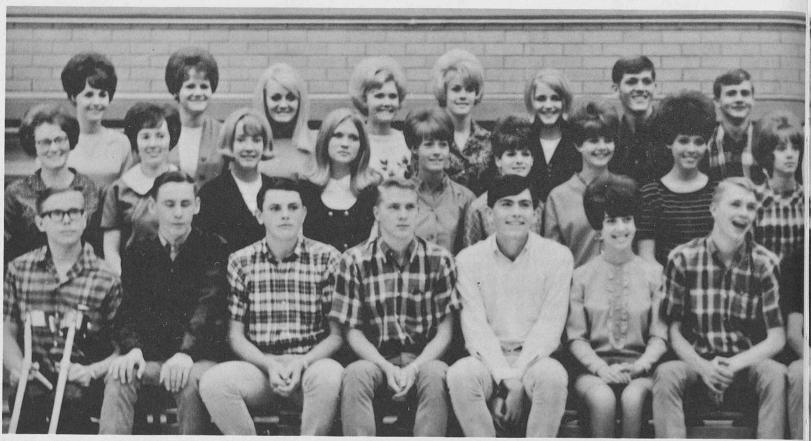

The executive council combined eight capable students as the leaders of the school. They spent many hours planning the kind of year Sky View students would be proud to remember. With the support of the studentbody, these student leaders chose for a theme during the school year "Success Depends on School Spirit." Sky View has received much recognition and a great name for the high standards found here. These students worked to keep it. Brent Lundberg, executive, was in charge of athletics. Janet Carlson, executive, dealt with both school and outside publicity. Cultural affairs were in the hands of Dennis Watkins, executive. Darlene Taylor, executive, was responsible for much of the success of the social activities. Evelyn Ashcroft, historian, spent much time compiling a school scrapbook and planning the school calendar and the Bobcat Sphere. Leading the studentbody and executive council as chairman was Paul Parker who handled the many responsibilities efficiently. Kathryn Mather helped plan activities along with her duties of minutes,

Two of the governing bodies of the school were the Student Senate and the Coordinating Council. The Coordinating Council consisted of club presidents, editors, executive council, cheerleaders, songleaders and girls' and boys' association representatives. These students met monthly to correlate club and school activities. Most of the studentbody participated in clubs and other extracurricular activities and were especially appreciative of the efforts of the council.

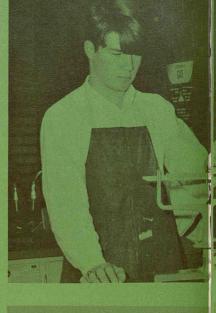

The Student Senate served as the legislative body at Sky View representing the studentbody in an advisory manner. Elected homeroom senators met monthly under the direction of the Executive Council and Mr. Eppich to discuss plans for student activities. Here opinions could be voiced and ideas could be shared. Results of the meetings were reported to the homerooms. To increase school spirit, posters for ballgames were assigned, carnival plans made, and money raised through the homerooms. It was through these groups that the students had a voice in school government. They worked hard to increase the stature of Sky View and make the year a success.

ACADEMICS... Stature Through Knowledge

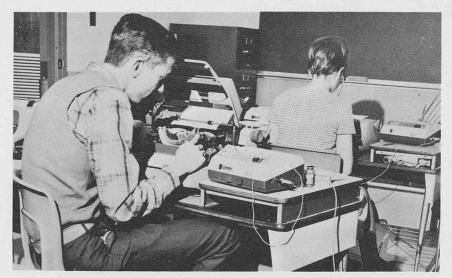

Long and plentiful hours in classrooms found students studying a great variety of subjects. Although the schedule was rarely changed, the classes were not repetitious. All students recall the hours spent along the paths of American literature or ancient mythology. The sounds of music of the band filtered down the halls to be mixed with the strains of a song coming from a choral class. As a difficult math problem was solved a feeling of satisfaction came. Yards of material turned into fashionable garments as girls stitched, unpicked and hemmed. Delight in the result of a tasty meal, or the disappointment of a soggy biscuit will be remembered. A sharp pencil made a delicate line and soon a mechanical drawing was made. Beautiful craft articles and works of art emerged as students learned to express themselves. The mysteries of the unknown were sought as students studied the world around them. There was that squeamish feeling that came as an animal was dissected. There were rollers and wet hair, tired muscles and tired minds—all a part of school life. A debate stimulated young minds to think for themselves. All were necessary to the development and growth of students' minds and bodies. Through them students would come to know stature.

BUSINESS... Lead to Advancement of Skills Necessary for Success

Upon completion of high school many of our students found themselves prepared for an entrance into the business world. This department offered such classes as shorthand, office procedures, type, business machines, bookkeeping, and record keeping. Business law, where the legal aspect was studied, and notehand, where students learned an efficient method of taking notes, were two new classes added to the curriculum. Distributive education offered students on-the-job training. A wellstaffed department sought to improve methods and ideas in teaching the concepts of modern business.

SOCIAL SCIENCES... Lead to Understanding of the Realities

History students study past, present, and future

The social science department aimed to teach students about the world in which they dwell. Possibly through a study of the past, students could learn to understand the current events which would be tomorrow's history. A three-year program offered world history for sophomores, American history for juniors, and American problems for seniors. Other courses taught were economics, sociology and psychology. The debate program was also affiliated with this department. A staff of capable teachers helped the students explore and build toward their future.

Across the building the art department offered classes dealing with design, painting, and ceramics. Through such classes students learned an appreciation of the

Penny Rae Barben English

The language arts department was one of the most vital in the Sky View curriculum. Here the art of communication was explored. Special study was focused on grammar and usage, literature, vocabulary and spelling, logical thinking and college preparatory skills. Sophomores studied literature and grammar while juniors focused on American literature. Seniors applied what had been previously studied. Several new teachers added a new spark of life to the department. With such willing and enthusiastic teachers, it was an interesting and worthwhile part of the curriculum.

While some in the language arts department really made English live, the librarians and speech teachers offered other phases. The library contained research materials, magazines, novels, biographies, and two new racks of paper back books. The librarians were willing to assist in any way they could. Often classes would spend entire periods using the facilities of our beautiful library. It was always filled before school and during noon hours. The speech department offered training in story telling, poetry, radio, public and extemporaneous speaking, and oratory. The school play was under the direction of the speech department.

... Prepares for Future Human Relationships

Broadening the education of students in the languages of the world was one of the objectives of the foreign language department. Courses in French, Spanish, and German were offered. The people and customs of the countries were studied along with the dialect. With the use of earphones, records and tapes, students learned the many intricacies in pronounciation. The art of communicating with others skillfully and meaningfully is important to all. With the guidance received in the language arts department, Sky View students can move into the world prepared.

The training of the exceptional student was the task of the Special Education department. Mrs. Cask, a new teacher at Sky View, sought to help these students learn and progress. The home assistance program was also under this department. Students who were homebound or hospitalized were visited by the traveling teacher, Mr. Kirby, and assisted in continuing their education.

The vocational science department made many additions and improvements. For boys, a general background was laid then used as a foundation for exploratory work. Classes offered were the new auto shop, basic and technical mechanical drawing, electronics, crafts and photography. The girls found home economic classes worthwhile as they learned skills necessary in the home. Classes in cooking, sewing and homeliving implanted vital information. Many young men and women began their careers in this department under dedicated and fine quality instructors.

MATHEMATICS... Gave Students Theoretical Knowledge of the World

The new concepts of modern mathematics were taught in the math department. Courses in basic math, practical math, plane and solid geometry, algebra I, algebra II, introductory analysis, trigonometry, and basic analytic geometry were part of the curriculum. For students who completed those, a unit of calculus gave them an opportunity to delve further into the science of numbers. Two new teachers, Misters Fife and Phillips added to the well-educated staff of math teachers that strove to meet state requirements and instill in their students a desire to continue in the field of math.

SCIENCES... Help Students Find Long Searched For Wonders

The science department provided students with many opportunities to gain an understanding of the unknown. An appreciation of the effects of science on students' lives was impressed on their minds. Specific courses were offered to those who had developed a deeper interest. Laboratory work taught students how to use equipment and gave valuable experience. Courses available were biology, botany, zoology, physical science, physiology, chemistry, and life science. Films, visual aids, models, and live and preserved specimens offered first hand knowledge. This knowledge would enable students to live more intelligently in the world about them.

Physical fitness was one of the goals of the girls physical education department. Units of baseball, swimming, football, volleyball, basketball, gymnastics, and track offered a variety of exercise and activity. Intramurals were played during class periods. Girls remember the invigorating exercises and relaxing fun as well as sore muscles and wet hair. All recognized the value of exercise in building healthy bodies. Modern dance classes taught dance techniques and creativity. Interesting half-time activities and an assembly and concert were presented by the students in these classes.

Jumping is an essential technique in volleyball performance.

Excellent facilities provided a healthy atmosphere for the boys physical education classes. Football, basketball, and volleyball made up some of the action. The trampoline and horizontal and parallel bars made possible a unit of gymnastics. Mats were used for tumbling, and special weight-lifting and wrestling rooms gave opportunity to those interested. The beautiful swimming pool was used by both girls and boys P.E. classes. Many physical skills and techniques were taught in this department where students could achieve personal stature.

Conventions, meetings, special projects, films, parties. Students found a diversion from class work. Business, culture, athletics, science . . . which club should be joined or activity sought . . . possibly several. Clubs stimulated interests, gave reason for goals and sparked warm friendships in those with common interests. Participation in the organizations gave students a feeling of prominence, of being needed, of being a special part of after school life. Information on possible future careers would prove of value when they began pursuing one in earnest. Talents were improved, developed and broadened. Experience in leadership positions gave a special kind of knowledge. An immense amount of fun was offered along with the growth in skill and learning. Relationships with the advisors who spent much time planning activities were improved. Pleasure and growth came with the hustle and bustle of the activities of Bobcat organizations.

Evidence of a deadline lay about the room . . . piles of wadded copy sheets, ruined dummy sheets, used flashbulbs, a broken pencil, a candy wrapper. Striving to please the studentbody, the Aurora staff spent many long hours choosing the pictures and gathering the advertisements. Photographers sent forth piles of invaluable pictures from the dark room. Editors sacrificed sleep, sanity and grades. Business managers collected money and understandingly put up with the giggles and gossip. Advisors put up with the deafening uproar and rush of deadlines and gave much needed advice. Staff members added their priceless and much appreciated assistance to the confusion. The principal's office was invaded frequently by difficulties that were solved by a calm hand. But there was a deeper meaning . . . one that only those who have experienced it can understand. All of this for a book . . . the Aurora. This was the reward.

CATONIAN...

Myriads of stairs lead up to the Catonian's own "Pub." A secluded haven, but by no means a secret one. One identity of the staff was lost as the aroma of cremated popcorn drifted from out the publications door into the main hall. When smelled, the popcorn had the effect of a destroying angel. The reporters were then cautioned to meet that deadline. Photographers flashed bulbs and retreated into dark rooms while businessmen scoured the nearby valley towns for advertisements. Thousands of rare scribbled news notes, a lone broken typewriter knob, splintered rulers, crumpled erasers; all enact their part. The newspaper staff delved into journalism which aided in coagulating wandering thoughts. This scene was re-enacted fourteen times until every scrap of up-to-the-minute school activity was sought out, brought to the press, and each blue Catonian box filled to capacity. Thus not only the written word of the Catonian reveals a story. Emotions go deeper than the paper they are printed on.

Combining the best of the many literary articles written at Sky View into a literary magazine—the task of the Catalyst staff. Art work had to be designed to illustrate the poems, essays and short stories. The pictures necessary had to be taken, developed and printed. Arrangements of the sale of the magazine required the cooperation and work of several staff members who were under the leadership of Miss Danielson. Their efforts and hard work resulted in a fine magazine filled with high quality reading. These students could rightfully be proud of the results of their labors. A magazine . . . the Catalyst.

If the ship should sink then we will all fall in.

Beginning their preparation for future careers, the Future Farmers of America diligently learned of the skills and techniques necessary. Many opportunities were offered the young men of this club. Delegates to the national convention and applicants for the state farmer degree represented the Sky View chapter. In honor of National FFA Week, the club held a parent and son banquet. Contests on parlimentary procedure presented a challenge. The Harvest Ball dance and assembly displayed creativeness and new talent. Many areas of development were explored in their activities.

FUTURE HOMEMAKERS OF AMERICA

The best way to a girl's heart was through the same club that teaches her the way to a man's heart. That club was none other than the Sky View Future Homemakers of America. Laughing, working, and learning together in a well-organized club fostered only warm reminiscences. Anxious hours spent in directing an assembly, last minute touches to dance scenery and the fun relaxing parties which followed are now past successes. Club members gained first hand directions by traveling to BYU for a tour and to a state convention in Salt Lake. This was good.

FUTURE NURSES

The Future Nurses, headed by Mrs. Bell, began to prepare themselves for a useful occupation by learning nursing skills. One of the highlights of their learning came when they attended a "birth defects" symposium in Salt Lake City sponsored by the Utah Chapter of the March of Dimes. This was the first conference of its kind in Western America.

By hearing from a number of interesting guest speakers and by seeing films on the field of teaching, the Future Teachers of America acquired many skills. A workshop at Utah State University taught these club members even more about the art of teaching. Possibly these skills will be very helpful in future occupations.

The thrill of a swift flight down a snow-covered hill cannot be equaled in the eyes of the skiers at Sky View. To help avoid broken bones, tips on skiing techniques and equipment were given by lecturers and movies. A ski day at Beaver gave them a chance to increase their abiility. With care and courage they will continue to pursue their sport.

KEY CLUB

An exciting dance and a fine assembly were but a few of the many activities of the Sky View Key Club. An annual banquet was held in their honor. As a service club, affiliated with Kiwanis International, they sought with real desire to build school and community through service.

PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB

Seeking to capture precious moments on film the Photography Club found enjoyment in the flash of a camera and the printing of a negative. Under the capable instruction of their advisor, Mr. Benson, they made their own unique club cards and learned more of their interest through lectures, field trips and personal experience.

CONCERT BAND

The development of musical talent was the goal of the Concert Band. Their progress toward it was displayed in the rhythmic tones that spilled forth from the band room each morning. The annual spring concert gave others the chance to enjoy the results of their labors. Their abilities brought honor and entertainment to Sky View.

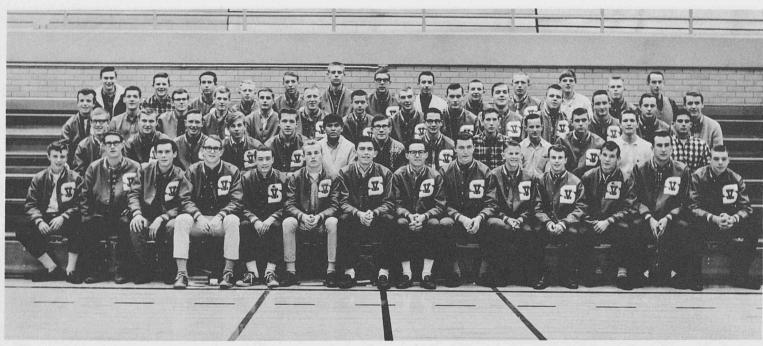

VARSITY BAND

Wrong notes, hours of practice, concerts, and valuable instruction all played a part in the growth of the Varsity Band. In beginning their high school musical careers, they found a challenge in the music placed before them. Participation in concerts helped develop their ability to perform. Continued diligence would bring attainment of goals.

Each having lettered in a sport, the members of the Lettermen Club were fine examples of Sky View manhood. Their talents were put on stage during their lively assembly. The annual lettermen banquet was held to honor those who so willingly participated in activities from ushering at assemblies and selling ice cream at noon to cheering at ball games.

PEP CLUB ... Bound The Bobcats Together In Spirit

The most faithful support Sky View sports received came from the enthusiastic Pep Club. The familiar blue dresses and white gloves in the halls marked game days with a special feeling. Their loud cheers and excited response at ball games and rallies were fine examples for the studentbody. Frequent meetings helped members learn routines and make plans for increasing pep and enthusiasm. They attended each game and cheered the team on through the final minutes. Besides their support of the team, the Pep Club made piles of posters for the halls each week. The Blue and White dance expressed their enthusiasm and gave students the opportunity to become better acquainted as school began. The assembly presented during Northwest Accreditation received much acclaim for its creativeness and talent. Teas with the clubs of other schools in the region promoted better relations. Their assistance as ushers at ball games was much appreciated by those who attended. White gloves, crushed pom-poms, a few tears, a lot of laughter, long bus rides, lost bus tickets, jokes, teas, and poster paint . . . all will be long remembered by the members. With the studentbody will remain the memory of the spirit the Pep Club built.

SCIENCE CLUB

An organization designed to evoke deep reasoning was the Sky View Science Club. Through the club, the members gained help with science fair projects. Authoritative guest speakers and numerous field trips gave them on-the-spot training. The club had superior standings at the Northern Utah Science Fair. They advanced.

STUDIO BAND

One of the most enthusiastic organizations proved to be the studio band. This group provided the pep music at rallies and ball games. Under the direction of John Manning, they sponsored a pep rally, displaying the many talents in the group. Their frequent practices resulted in fine sounds that became a real asset to Sky View.

Students who sought enjoyment in the beauty of art found pleasure in the newly formed Art Club. Guest speakers, films, and field trips gave them opportunity to enlarge upon their interests. As they participated in these activities, they broadened their knowledge of artistic beauty and stimulated an appreciation of art throughout the school.

MODEL U.N.

Aware of current world problems, the U. N. club worked towards understanding and solving them. Many hours of study and preparation were required for the annual Model United Nations held in Salt Lake City. Representing the countries of Israel, West Germany, and Australia, they learned to think for themselves and to stand for the rights they deserved.

GIRLS' GLEE

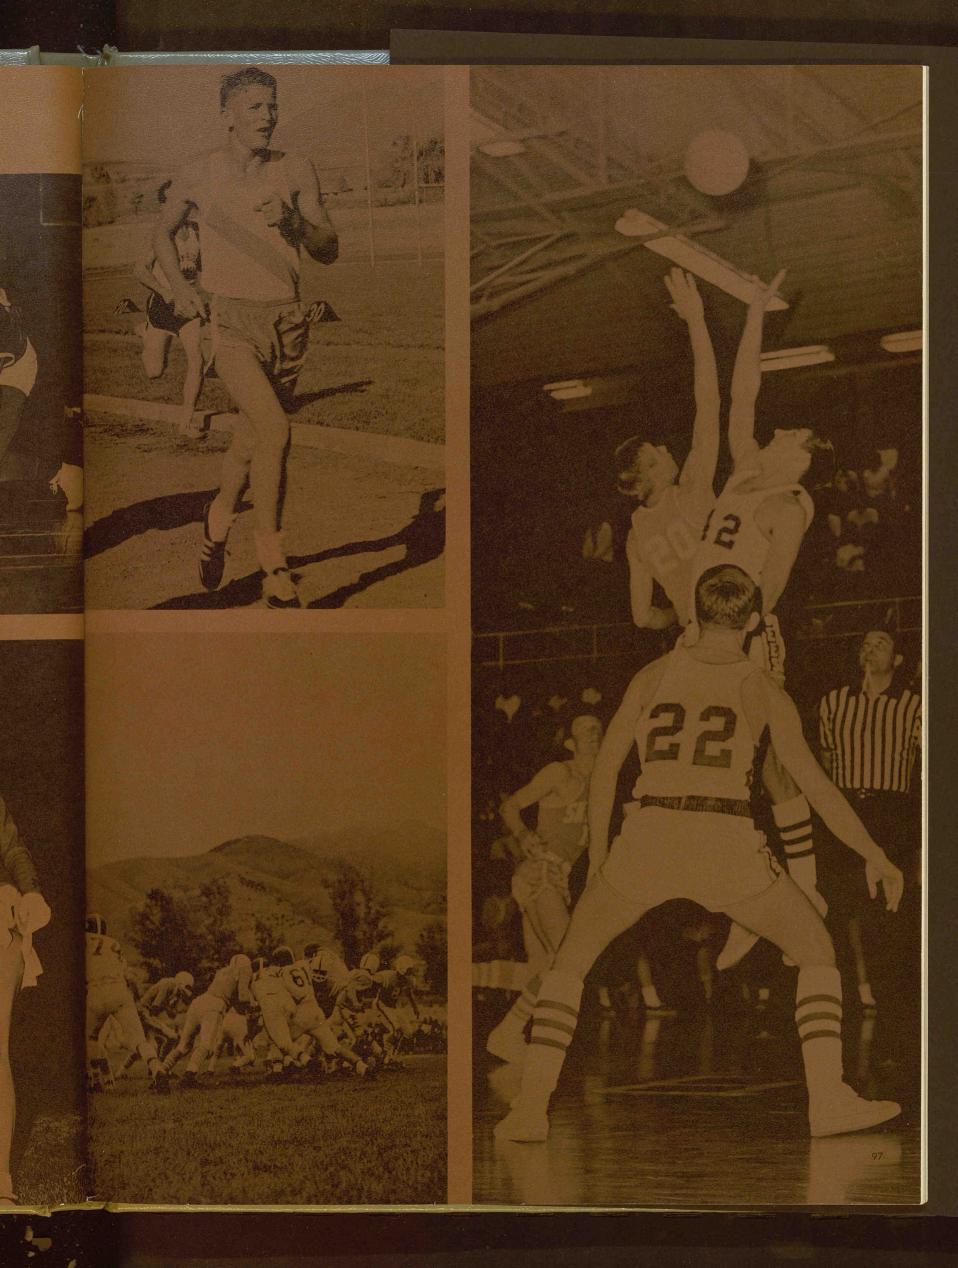

ATHLETICS... Stature Through Competition

A noisy locker room, loud laughter and shouting, dirty gym clothes, disappointments, tears, pep talks . . . all characteristic of the athletic department. All held a special meaning for many young men on the threshold of manhood. The long, hard workouts resulted in victories . . . and defeats. But determination brought them back again. They had to prove themselves to the coach, to the school, and to the community, but most important to themselves. Their efforts were repaid. They truly deserved to stand tall. There was a thrill at playing the game, and the feeling that came when sitting on the sidelines. There was the feeling of a game well played and the feeling that came with defeat. There were pranks in the locker room. There were strong and lasting friendships. There was the sight of cheering fans and the sound of words of encouragement. There were injuries and disappointments. There were long bus rides and training rules, tired muscles and strides in sportsmanship. There was that proud feeling of having been involved. The training, the association and the work towards a common goal built character . . . and character built the stature of a school. Sky View.

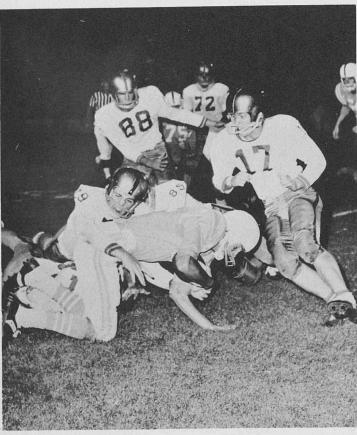

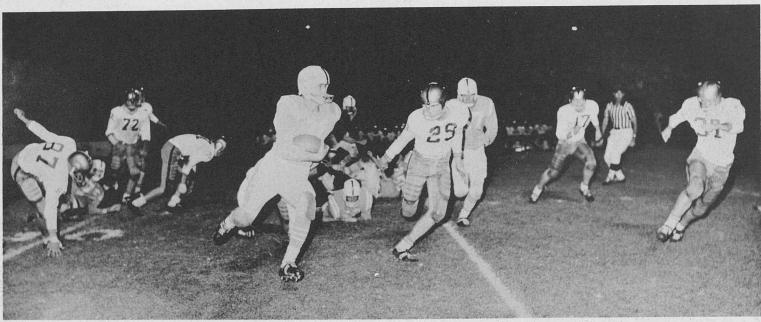

FOOTBALL... New Spirit, New Goals, New Determination

With the return of fall air came the excitement of gridiron action. Many young men spent long hours of practice, suffered sore muscles and forfeited noon hours for chalk talks in preparation. Much knowledge was gained in pre-season action against a strong Bountiful team. Season play brought many disappointments. A tie resulted with Weber in a game that could have gone either way. The Bobcats played a hard-fought game against Ogden only to lose in the final seconds. Similar losses occured in games against Logan, Roy and other strong teams of the Region. It took real spirit and determination to return after such losses. New school and personal stature was gained through the efforts of a fine coaching staff and a hard-working team.

BASKETBALL...

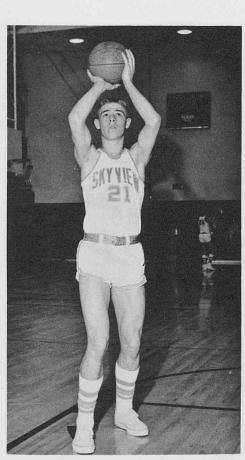

The Bobcat five once again proved to be the best in Region I. For the second consecutive season they posted a perfect record in league play and was the only undefeated Class A team in Utah. They claimed top honors in offensive statistics. The tactics of a full court press, rebound strength, speed, balance and good coaching earned the quintet a starting berth in the annual state tournament. A goal of staying all four nights was set and reached. Outstanding sportsmanship and fine play brought victory and recognition. They ranked third in the State, losing only one game. Individual honors were given to Nielson, Hall, and Nish as they placed on the All-Region team. Nielson was chosen for the All-State team. The effort they put forth, their mutual respect and admiration for each other, their determination when the going got rough, and the support of the school and community brought them an 18-1 record for the entire season. They truly increased individual and school stature. They were true champions.

As Sky View opened her doors in the fall, one of athletics most rigorous sports also began, that of the cross-country race team. The fellows that turned out for this sport, did not do it for the physical pleasure. Long practice sessions were a must, while strained and tired muscles, sore feet and burning lungs were an equal part of it. All pointed towards complete readiness for the rugged race itself.

When the team entered a race, it could look forward to a run of up to two to three miles at a time. Standing three or four deep at the starting line, the group soon thinned and the real champions stood out. Our team met the challenge and came out standing tall over its fine record and successful season.

WRESTLING... Three Year

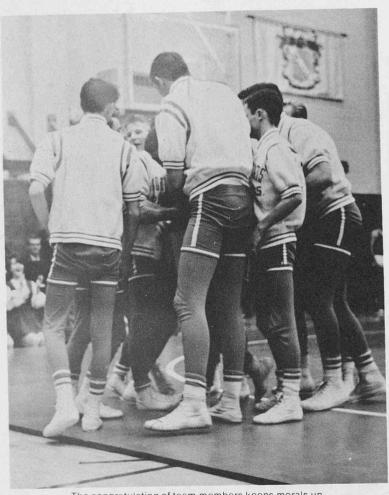

When wintersports are thought of, one of the first to cross the mind is the highly competitive sport of wrestling. Beginning in the late fall and continuing until early spring, the fellows involved had a continuous battery of pulled muscles, bruises, mat burns and starving to make it anything but pleasant. It made a strong team that was ready for any team that would wrestle them.

Strength, combines with quickness and agility, served to make our wrestling team one of the finest in the state. Their excellent record stood out as they dominated division and region competition. The long hours of practice and frequent personal disappointments paid

Under the direction of a new head coach, Sky View's wrestling team set many new goals to work for, and through his able leadership and the drive and determination of everyone of the team, Sky View had another "state-stuff" team to be proud of.

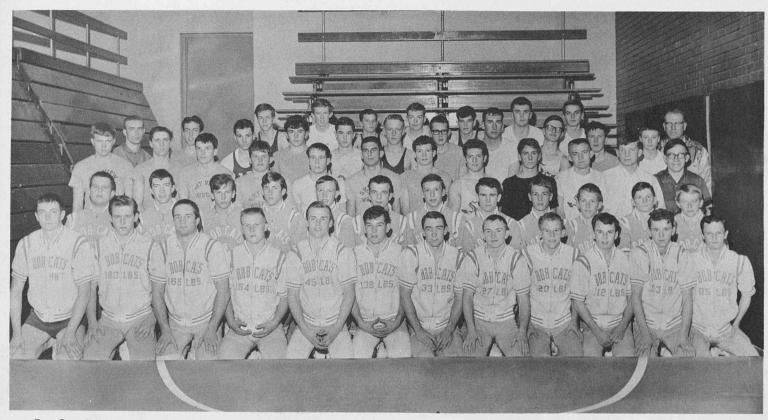

G. Lindley gives opponent evil-eye.

Spirit of the National Sport

Days filled with spring sunshine were also occupied with baseball practice for many sports-minded young men. Under the capable instruction of Coaches Robertson and Ransom, the team worked towards a great season. Batting practice improved hitting power. Special plays were set up, and the team learned proper methods in various game situations. The team was given strength by the fine senior players. Juniors prepared for the time they would be on their own, but gave necessary support to the seniors. Three practice games and seven league games were scheduled. Intersquad games tested their skills. It was a time for building strength and character.

The track circling the football field was put to good use as the track teams began their workouts. The general area included in track and field events satisfied the varied interests of spectators. Feats of strength, endurance and speed tested the team's talents. There were high jumps, relays, pole vaults, javelin throws and hurdles. Track shoes, sawdust, "Cloud Nine," and breath-taking exercise had a special meaning for those who participated. They understood what was required and the rewards that came with a race well run.

GOLF... Tested Skill and Knowledge of the Green

The golf course became the site of activity for six returning golf lettermen and many others whose interest lay in the intrigue of a good game of golf. Skill rather than strength was emphasized in this sport. Long slender clubs and small white balls were symbolic of the golf team. Good exercise, healthy surroundings and the challenge of overcoming obstacles made the game enjoyable. Friendships were strengthened and skills improved with regular practice. With an eye on the state tournament, the golfers strove for trophies, entertainment and recognition.

Accuracy could make the difference between a win or loss.

Great pains are taken, to make it right.

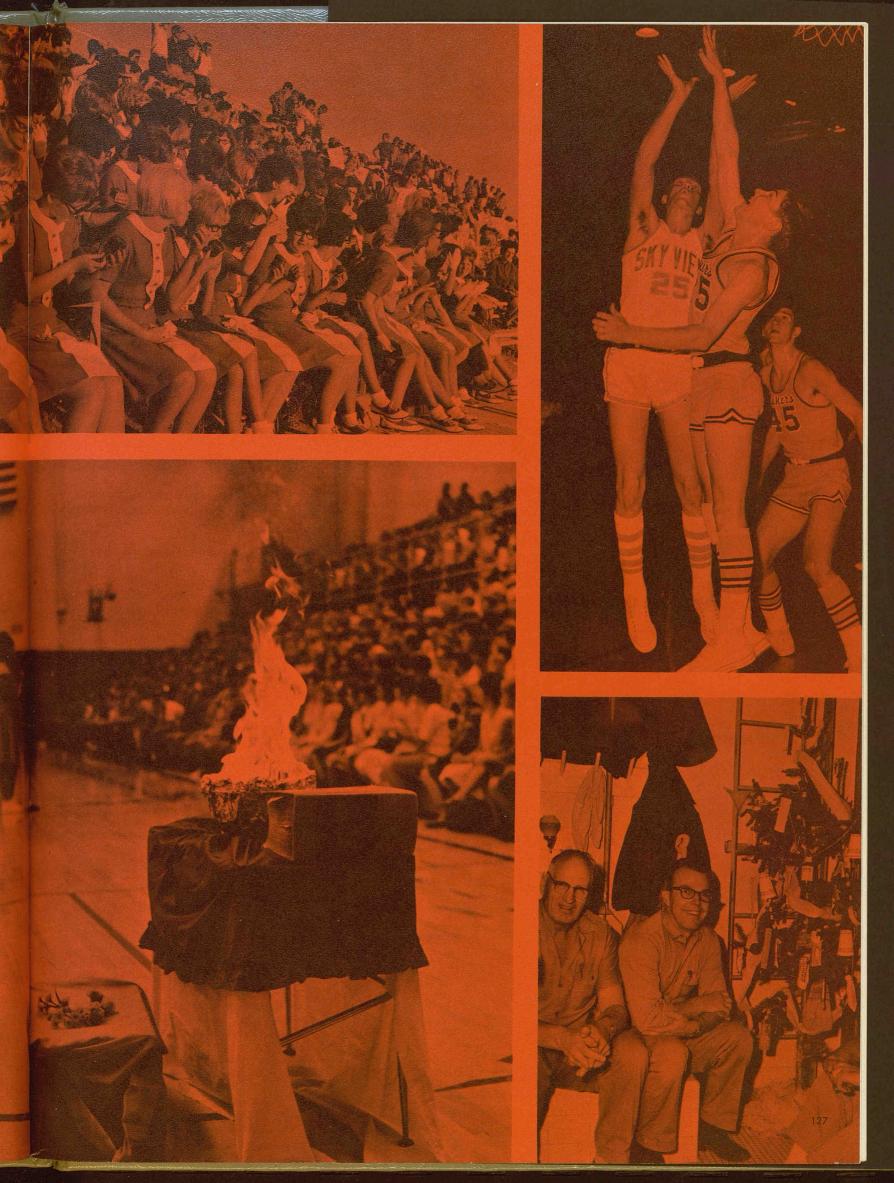

ACTIVITIES... Stature through Participation

Extra curricular activities found their way into the schedules and hearts of much of the studentbody. The rewards of new and closer friendships, better developed talents, and a great deal of fun were well worth the time and effort put forth. The thrills of a stage production or the anticipation of a prom, the precision of a marching routine or the decoration of a Christmas tree; each had its place in student life. Pep assemblies released enthusiasm and tension. Continuous practice was repaid with fine performances and precious memories. Opportunities for creativity, expression of ideas and development of talent were presented and taken. Those who did not take part behind the scenes enjoyed the results of others' devotion. The activities were not only a diversion from the classroom, but gave a special kind of education of one's self and others. It was time well spent.

HOMECOMING... Brought Back Cherished

Crowning the week's events, the Homecoming dance pleased many couples with a romantic evening. Blue and gold streamers, silhouettes, and a glowing painted sunset set the mood of the theme song, "Sunrise, Sunset," sung by Craig Jessop. Jay Mauchley made the piano ring with "Autumn Leaves." The royalty was presented with roses and a special dance. It was a beautiful conclusion to an exciting week.

Memories for Alumni

Traditional bonfire of Homecoming blazes forth additional spirit.

After school hours during the week of Homecoming were busily filled as students prepared their entries for the parade. Homerooms, classes, and various organizations put brain and brawn to work as they competed for the prize. Thousands of napkins, yards of crepe paper streamers, delicate lettering, and a considerable amount of time and ideas went into making the trek down main street in Smithfield a success. The parade led to the school where a night rally built enthusiasm for the following days events. A roaring bonfire lighted the football field as team captains and pep speakers sparked the students to cheers and songs. The spirit was built for a victorious Homecoming.

Precious memories were welcomed along with those who made them as the alumni once more returned to the place of treasured high school years. The Homecoming assembly brought alumni talent to the stage once more. A windy, cold day and a muddy field did not halt the teams' efforts against the Box Elder Bees. The week was one of renewed friendships, and new experiences mingled with the old.

LOVE IS ETERNAL... Students Portray Famous People

Sharon Davis as Mary Todd Lincoln.

The beautiful gold curtains of the auditorium were drawn commencing the three almost professional performances of the annual school play. A beautiful and famous story was presented to an enthralled audience—the love story of Abraham Lincoln and Mary Todd. Its touching scenes portrayed the home life, joys, and heartaches of Mary Todd. The tender love that grew between Abe and Mary after their meeting, the heartaches for two years after their engagement as Mary waited for Abe to come, and the distress of her family and admirers could be felt by all who partook of the excellent characterizations. The poignant story of their life after their marriage and the devoted work as president and first lady was brought to a climax with the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation which began a new period in history.

The ringing applause, the hearty congratulations, and the pride in a job well done brought to a close eight weeks of daily rehearsals, hard work, and study. Their efforts achieved new heights. They received their reward.

Many people were responsible for the success of the play. It would have been an impossible task except for the exceptional talents of the cast, the scenery, property, costuming, make-up, sound and light crews, the business managers, the prompters, the student directors, and the talented and capable director, Mrs. Carlson. Swedish, Spanish, and French models add interest.

Hours of planning and backstage labor were required for the production of the musical. Several times a week sound of music filtered out of orchestra rehearsals. Business managers handled tickets, money, and plagued valley merchants for advertisements. Paint splotches and pounding hammers characterized the activities of the scenery crew. Beards and slanted eyes were created by the make-up crew. Property managers located special props to suit the scene. Photographers captured memorable moments on film. The stage crew efficiently changed scenery as the curtain pullers patiently awaited their cues. Lighting crews flipped switches to achieve the right effect. Directors planned costumes, dances, scenery, music, and speeches. Student directors, cast members, stage chorus, and dancers gave freely of their time and talents to perfecting the show. The efforts of all were rewarded by the results.

Brilliant Future

Linda Low and Sammy Fong dream of their future.

A young Chinese picture bride, Mei Lei, arrives in Chinatown, San Francisco, to marry Sammy Fong, to whom she was promised. Sammy is a night club owner who is in love with one of his employees, Linda Low, but has not yet asked for her hand in marriage. In order to marry Linda he sells his contract to a stanch Chinese father who desires a bride for his son, Wang Ta. Mei Lei falls in love with Ta, but Ta has asked Linda to marry him. A complicated chain of events brings the story to a happy conclusion.

ASSEMBLIES... Gave Students

Lie-detector specialist provides interesting and informative assembly

Assemblies not only provided a necessary diversion from the classroom, but gave students an opportunity to display special abilities before the studentbody. Education and culture played a part in the entertainment. The executive council set off the year with the hilarious sophomore initiation assembly. A cartoonist and a crippled basketball champion intrigued students with their skill. Auto safety films impressed on students minds the importance of safedriving habits. The Terry Sisters, a professional singing duo, returned to delight the students in song and laughter. The visit of Vernon Law, professional baseball pitcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates, was another highlight of the year.

ASSEMBLIES... Stirred Emotions and Intellects

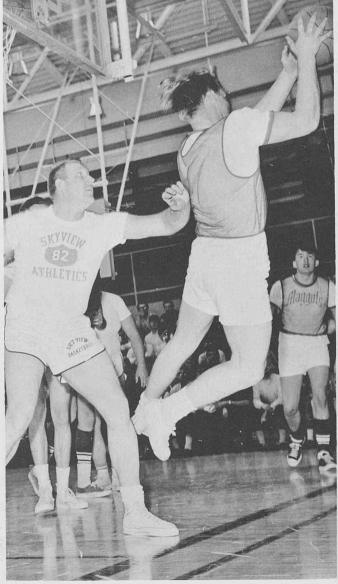

Pep assemblies add interest and enthusiasm for students.

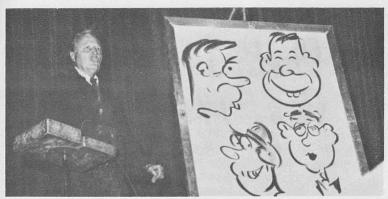

Several organizations put their creative ideas into action on stage. The Pep club, FFA, FHA, Spanish and French clubs, Vistauns, Key club and modern dance classes invited student participation. Each class presented an assembly prior to their dance. Girls' and boys' association offered a fashion show and exhibition ballgame. Musical assemblies included the Delta Phi Chorus, band and choral concerts, a preview of the musical, and an accomplished accordionist. A local hypnotist and a lie detection expert used students as subjects. The year was concluded with studentbody nominations, the campaign assembly, the installation assembly and the awards assembly, with its traveling assembly trophy.

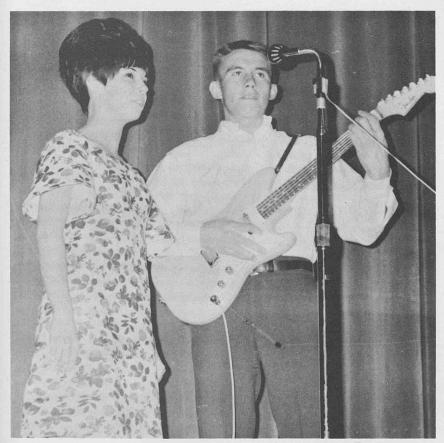

Outside assemblies furthered student education.

PEP ASSEMBLIES ... Encourage School Spirit

Songleaders at their best.

Clever skits brighten pep assemblies.

Pep assemblies were held to build enthusiasm for sport events. Various pep groups entertained and enthused students with skits, comic football games, the election of a football prince, a great debate, and special speakers. Cheerleaders, songleaders, and pep band spent many hours planning and practicing for these assemblies. Their efforts were rewarded with the great amount of enthusiasm produced.

MYSTIC SPRING... Superb Affair of Beauty

'Pink Elephants" portray the lighter side of life.

Months of planning and preparation were climaxed with Junior Prom week. The assembly, "Moods of Color," brilliantly lit the auditorium with colored lights and created the feelings and moods of various colors through vocal, instrumental, dance, comedy and dramatic acts.

The concert, presented by the Fraternity Sounds Showtime, preceded the prom. It offered pleasant sounds in folk singing, comedy, magician and popular singing acts.

Couples enjoy the atmosphere of "Mystic Spring."

A sparkling blue waterfall and carpet-covered ramps led couples into a dreamy atmosphere of a Mystic Spring with its theme song, "Somewhere My Love." A pink ceiling with a gold center above a gazebo enhanced the spring setting. Pink and green walls accented the bandstand and garden scene with its fountain, swing, and love seat. Satin steps provided a throne for the royalty. The beautiful evening was a tribute to junior abilities.

SWEETHEART BALL... Enchanting Evening for All

Pink hearts gaily accented the mood of Valentines Day at the Sweetheart Ball. A shimmering tree covered with angel hair illustrated the theme song, "The Sweetheart Tree," sung by Gary Jones. The royalty, one couple chosen from each class, was honored and presented with carnations by a young prince and princess. A romantic setting, season and mood made a complete evening for the many who attended.

"Joke...get it?"

Oh Brian, I bet you say that to all the girls.

CALIFORNIA... Penetrating Effort Brought Great Reward

"I don't use Ban, and I still got to come.

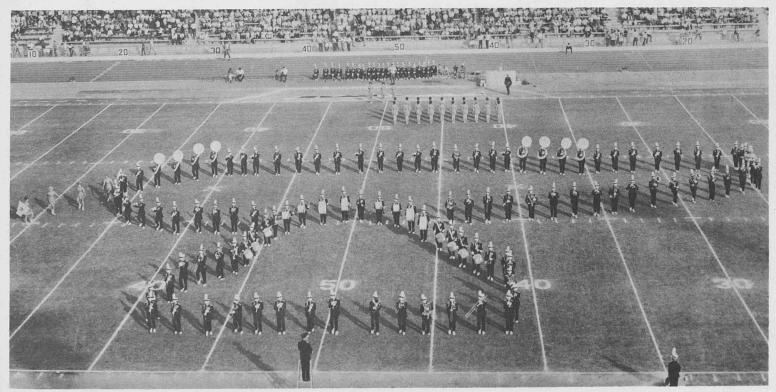

"Darn that bird!"

Mm. Uh...Jerry...Uhm..

The climax of hours of rehearsal was the trip to San Diego for the half-time performance at the San Diego Charger-Denver Bronco football game. Intricate formations beginning with a HI and proceeding to a cannon, the liberty bell, a covered wagon and finally a huge U.S. and a 40' by 60' American flag portrayed "The American Profile." A standing ovation brought tears to the eyes of the performers. All will remember the pillow fights, bus rides, the visit to Tijuana, the tour of San Diego Bay and the trip to Disneyland as highlights in their lives.

The cannon formation took hours of determined practice.

VISTAUNS... Hard Work Produced Precisioned Skill

The covered wagon symbolizes our Western heritage.

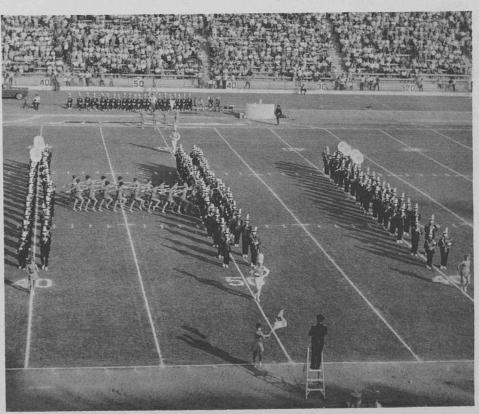

"One more puddle won't hurt!"

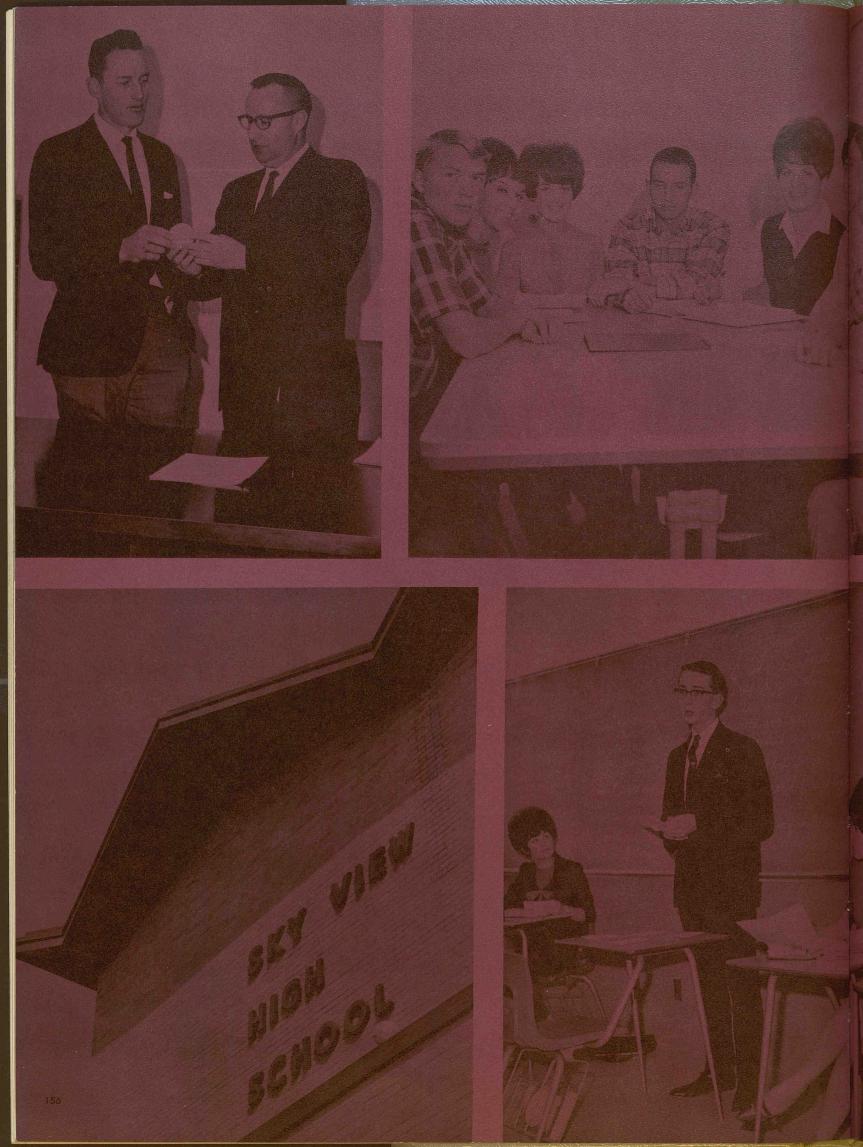

One of the most skilled groups was the Vistauns. Many hours of exercise and rehearsal brought the satisfaction of perfected routines. Their smiling performance with the band at San Diego brought unequalled thrills. Half-time shows at Sky View, Weber State and USU gave them state wide recognition. Attending the Bear River Invitational and the review at Sky View gave further opportunity to display their precision. Their performances were something of which the entire school could be proud.

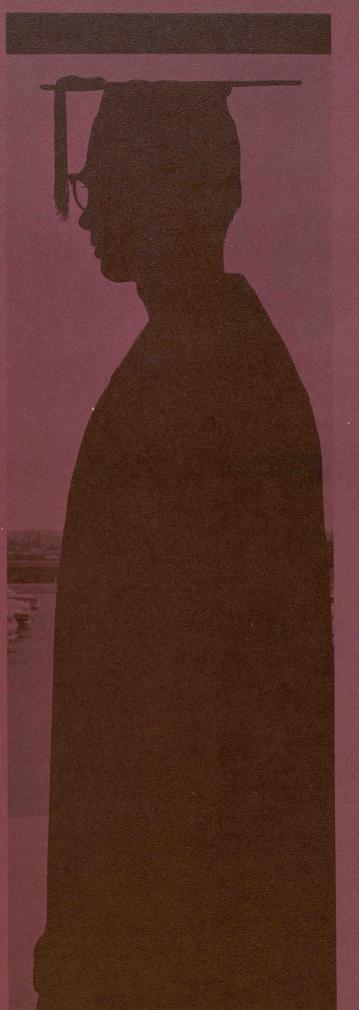

Disneyland was a highlight in the trip to California.

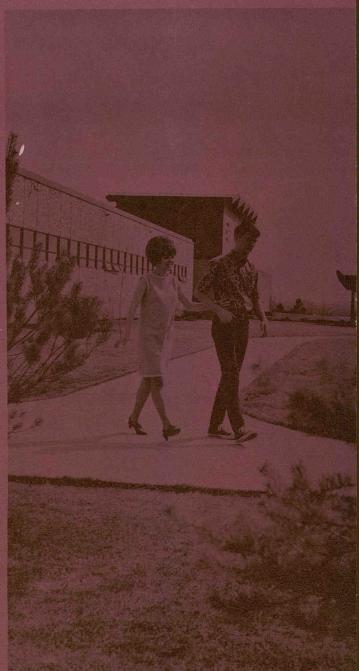

Band and Vistauns spell out welcome to California audience.

HONORS... Stature through Achievement

The climax of years of studying came as commencement time neared. Future leaders were repaid in part for their excellent performance. A convincing debate, a powerful oration, an activity award, a straight "A" report card—all had special meaning to Sky View scholars. The feeling of a job well done was a good one. They met challenge and competition with spirit and benefited from it. A small reward is theirs now, but the knowledge gained will carry them forward to even greater heights.

STERLING SCHOLARS...

Ten outstanding seniors were interviewed and selected to represent Sky View in state competition for the Sterling Scholar Awards. Portfolios were judged and seven of the finalists were from our school. Cash awards and scholarships were awarded to winners. Sterling silver pins were presented to finalists. Each scholar received an embossed certificate. KSL and the Deseret News were the contest sponsors.

OUTSTANDING SENIORS

The senior class devoted much time and effort in making the school year a success. Twenty senior students were chosen by their classmates as outstanding seniors. These students gave of themselves. They were chosen to represent their class because of their achievements, their scholarship, their leadership and their citizenship. Several held student offices and played an important role in student government. Others participated in the forensics program and qualified for the state meet. Musical and dramatic productions took advantage of their abilities. The Pep club and Vistauns brought spirit and recognition. The entire school benefited from their persistent efforts.

OUTSTANDING SENIORS

One of the most commendable traits of these outstanding seniors was their example for others. Their friendliness and school spirit made them pleasant to work with. Acceptance of responsibility and willingness to carry their duties through made them dependable. Student directors, basketball and wrestling stars spent many hours after school in preparation for their special event. A newspaper, a yearbook, a history book and outside publicity were produced under their direction. They strove to make their last year at Sky View the best. They share the glory they helped make with their classmates. They were worthy of their title as outstanding seniors.

Many hours of consistent work and study resulted in a 3.7 or above grade average. These students ranked at the top of their class scholastically. Their high grades gave many an opportunity to attain scholarships and continue their education. They gained the respect and admiration of their classmates and were recognized for what they were. A gold pin was presented to each one on the awards assembly. The true reward was the knowledge gained while achieving.

Think school is a laugh?
See how funny it is when you can't get a good-paying job.

A small education is something you can't laugh off. It's the biggest handicap you'll ever have . . . today, tomorrow, the day after tomorrow, and every day of your working life.

And it's a funny thing. People who really stay with it and get a good education are often seen laughing all the way to the bank.

It's no joke. To get a good job today, you need a good education. A good education is the number-one requirement for the better jobs with the better salaries . . . and the better futures, too.

So if you're in school now...stay there! Learn all you can for as long as you can. If you're out of school, you can still get lots of valuable training outside the classroom. Just call on the Youth Counselor at your State Employment Service. Or visit a Youth Opportunity Center, which has been set up in many cities to help you.

To get a good job, get a good education
