DECA Top 10 Medal Winner

Sachem High School North's Avi Talsania earned a medal for being a top 10 performer in the Automotive Services Marketing event at the DECA International Career Development Conference in Orlando, Florida. In this event, participants were challenged to perform marketing functions related to auto dealers, service stations and related businesses.

Talsania placed first in his overall category at the DECA State Career Conference in Rochester this past March, which qualified him to compete at the DECA ICDC. He joined more than 20,000 high school business students worldwide in competitions and leadership conferences.

Featured News

Elementary school students showed their appreciation for first responders during several parades and ceremonies. Many of the district's schools invited first responders to the building including police officers, firefighters, sheriff's deputies, doctors and nurses. Students lined the bus circles of their buildings holding thank-you signs and cheering on the first responders as they paraded through.

The Ride for Life made its way through Sachem on May 19 to raise awareness and support in the fight against ALS. This year, the Ride for Life made stops at Sachem High School East, Sagamore Middle School, Sachem High School North, Tamarac Elementary School and Merrimac Elementary School. Students presented checks to the Ride for Life organization along the way to help with patient services.

The Sachem Central Teachers' Association distributed 25,000 free books to members of the Sachem community during its Reading Opens the World Literacy and Book Fair on May 12. Hundreds of families and educators lined up outside of Sachem High School North to collect books for Sachem students of all ages. Teachers were invited to take up to 30 free books to restock their classroom libraries, whereas students chose five books to bring home. The books were received through a grant from the American Federation of Teachers, in conjunction with First Book and New York State United Teachers.

Seneca Middle School raised $6,575 for the Make-A-Wish Foundation throughout the month of March. Several classes and student organizations held drives and fundraisers to raise money for the cause. Seneca Middle School teacher Michael Dreyhaupt and student Sophia Espiritu were both Make-A-Wish recipients and presented the check to the foundation.

Students at Lynwood Avenue Elementary School learned about community service with project-based learning activities. Most recently, third graders raised $2,559 for Ronald McDonald House Charities after researching and planning different fundraisers.

Leaders in the Sachem community visited Tamarac Elementary School for the school's first "Readers are Leaders" event. Leading up to the event, students participated in activities and a spirit week centered around literacy. The culmination was inviting several professionals to the building for a day filled with read alouds and interactive presentations.

BOE Recognizes Student Achievements

The Sachem Central School District Board of Education recognized several groups of students during its May 16 meeting.

Students from Samoset Middle School, High School East and High School North who participated in the Special Olympics were honored. Additionally, Sachem student and staff volunteers were recognized for helping out at the event.

Chairperson for Secondary Music Gerard Giglio also recognized fifth through eighth grade music students who participated in the intermediate division of the Long Island String Festival.

The final recognition of the evening honored this year's valedictorians and salutatorians from both high schools. At Sachem High School East, Siddharth Sheth was named valedictorian and Jada Drew was named salutatorian. At Sachem High School North, Alexa Ginis earned the valedictorian designation whereas Sara Breitenbecker and Gianna Marchese were named co-salutatorians.
